

NEW YORK POST

CROWD-PLEASER

January 10, 2008 -- NICKY Gottlieb, a 28-year-old with Asperger Syndrome and the star of the moving new documentary, "Today's Man," charmed the premiere audience at the Tribeca Grand on Monday night, talking about his obsessions with languages, TV game shows - and Vanna White. "Vanna is beautiful," he said, adding that Heather Locklear is "gorgeous." But, "Sarah Jessica Parker is my favorite celebrity of all time," he joked, to the delight of the "Sex and the City" star, who was there. The film, made by Nicky's sister, Lizzie Gottlieb, airs tomorrow on PBS.